DETAILS

On August 2, 1981, Jose Esuaro "Che" Dominguez left his Stockton, California, home, walking to meet with friends at Stribley Park, located nearby. At the time, he was wearing gray corduroy pants, gray tennis shoes, and a black t-shirt with the name "Che" printed below a cancer zodiac sign. The Franklin High School jazz band trumpet player and wrestler never returned home.

Dominguez was initially believed to be a runaway since family and tipsters reported that he had been seen; however, Dominguez did not reappear or contact family during holidays or his birthday, which was unusual for the teen. In 1989, an individual was charged for an alleged role in Che's disappearance, but charges were dropped when a key witness recanted his story.
