DETAILS

Majd Kamalmaz is a psychologist who was treating refugees in the region from war-torn Syria. In February of 2017, he traveled to Syria to visit an elderly family member in Damascus. During this trip, he was also looking to establish a clinic to aid those who have been traumatized by the Syrian civil war. A day after arriving, Kamalmaz was stopped at a Syrian Government checkpoint in Mezzeh, a suburb of Damascus, and has not been seen or heard from since that day.
