Lewiston, Idaho - Clarkston, Washington

Kristin David

DETAILS

Kristin Noel David, a 22-year-old senior at the University of Idaho, was last seen alive on Friday, June 26, 1981, while bicycling from Moscow, Idaho southward on U.S. Highway 95 towards Lewiston, Idaho. On July 4, 1981, David's dismembered remains began to be discovered in and along the Snake River six miles west of Clarkston, Washington, in an area just west of Silcott Island. Some, but not all, of the remains were recovered elsewhere along the river the next day. The remains had been concealed inside black plastic bags and some of the body parts were wrapped in pages from various April 1981 editions of the local newspaper. David's blue 10-speed bicycle, clothing, and other personal items were never recovered.

Early in the investigation, multiple individuals traveling Highway 95 on the day of David's disappearance reported seeing a female cyclist matching David's description being approached by a man driving a brown van on the west, or southbound, side of the highway just outside Genesee, Idaho. Additional reports suggest the same man also spoke with or approached different female cyclists or pedestrians along Highway 95 the same day.

SUSPECTS

The unknown suspect was described as a White male, approximately 30 years old, weighing roughly 180 pounds, and around 5'10" tall. The unknown suspect was further described as being stocky or husky with a beard. The unknown suspect's hair and beard were described as brown by one individual and red/reddish by another, however no other individuals provided a specific hair or beard color. The unknown suspect may have shaved his beard or taken other steps to change his appearance after the crime.

The unknown suspect reportedly drove a well-kept brown van with yellow license plates with dark lettering. It is unknown if the suspect was the van's registered owner or whether the yellow plates properly corresponded to the van. The van may have had a sliding side door on the passenger side, two swing-out rear doors—each with a window, and the van may have been somewhat customized.
