In May 2001, a white female prostitute was raped in Dayton, Ohio. The victim met the offender in a vice area and agreed to a dollar amount and a crack amount in exchange for sex. The victim and offender entered a motel room that was rented by the offender. During the sex act, the offender became very aggressive, choking the victim and slamming her head against the bathroom floor. The victim was sexually assaulted and was then told she could leave.

The victim described the offender as a Hispanic male, 40s, clean cut, possibly wearing glasses, and a crack addict, with the possible first name of Vincent. The offender spoke the English language.

In May 2003, an elderly white female was sexually assaulted and strangled in her residence in Marion, Indiana. The victim lived alone in a single-family dwelling in a transitional neighborhood. There was no forced entry into her residence.

In 2004, a case-to-case CODIS hit occurred between these two cases, which remain unsolved. The Marion, Indiana Police Department is requesting any agency with similar cases to contact them, especially cases with partial DNA profiles for comparison purposes.
